ACADEMIC MACE

An academic mace is a decorated staff, carried in a ceremonial fashion by a mace-bearer to represent the authority of an institution. Processions often feature maces for parliamentary or formal academic occasions. In the United States, most colleges and universities use a mace for formal ceremonies, such as commencement exercises.

The Tallulah Falls School mace was first suggested by Tallulah Falls School President and Head of School Larry A. Peevy to represent the dignity and history of the campus.

President Peevy designed the ceremonial mace and commissioned the help of Mr. John Moss, a master woodworker from Clarkesville, Georgia. Mr. and Mrs. Larry Thompson of Milledgeville donated the beautiful piece of black walnut used in the creation of the mace.

GONFALON

The gonfalon is a vertical banner that typically hangs from a cross bar. The gonfalon is believed to have originated in Medieval times but remains a part of the modern educational tradition. The gonfalon is a standard, and in Italian the gonfalonier is the “standard bearer.” The Tallulah Falls School gonfalon bears the school crest and is displayed on stage at important academic gatherings.

Tallulah Song

Where the mountains rise to the southern skies,
And the holly and the pine tree grow;
And gather all at wisdom's call,
To the heart of the school we know.

We sing to thee, Tallulah!
Thy children we, Tallulah!
Oh, may our song re-echo long,
In praise to thee, Tallulah!

Thy home is high to the wisdom nigh,
To the strength and the joy of the hills.
To us, oh bring thee while we sing
The lore of its crags and rills.

We sing to thee, Tallulah!
Thy children we, Tallulah!
Oh, may our song re-echo long,
In praise to thee, Tallulah!

When the road we're bound goes winding round,
And the crag before us hides our view,
"Just to the bend, so on to the end,"
Rings clear thy counsel true.

We sing to thee, Tallulah!
Thy children we, Tallulah!
Oh, may our song re-echo long,
In praise to thee, Tallulah!
